LANSBURGH & BRO. NARROW ESCAPE OF A STEAMER'S CREW

Her Hull.

Men Had Ea'en No Food for Two Days.

On Her Way to Mobile to Be Turns Over to a Coal Company.

Norfolk. Va., April 6.- The steamship Senboard, of Philadelphia, which sailed from New York for Mobile on Monday last, put in here in distress shortly after noon yesterday. A great hole was atove in her above the water line, and she was towing a swamped lifeboat. Everything about her gave evidence of the storm and stress which she had passed through. She was boarded and the story of their narrow escape from death was told by the crew. They said that a stiff gale caught them Tuesday when off Currituck light, or this coast, and the versel became un manageable. Her head could not be kept o the sea, and the waves beating against her stern stove the great hole in it, through the water poured in a torrent, washing the lower deck. Soon after this she sprung a leak, and the crew, who thought, they sold, that every downward plunge she made would be her last, held a council and determined to abandon her.

The lifeboat, made fast by a big cable, was launched, but soon filled and sunk. The crew, fearing to attempt escape in the remaining boats, which they said they did not think could live in the high sea running, decided to stick to the steamer, and managed finally to bring her into port. When they arrived they were wet to the skin, and had eaten nothing for about two days were worn out, and only after they and determined to abandon her. skin, and had eaten nothing for about two days, were worn out, and only after they had had some hours of sleep could they be induced to tell their story. They said that men were never nearer death than they were on Tuesday, and they looked it.
The Seabord, which some twenty-five years ago was one of the Bay Line fleet, plying between Baltimore and Norfolk, is plying between Battimore and Norious, is commanded by Capt. Ralph Bisk. The chief mate. Edward Riley, is a filibuster, long associated with Johnny O'Briea, of the Dauntless. Edward Marshall is chief engineer. The steamer was chartered to the Gulf City Coal Company, of Mobile, and was on her way to be turned over to that concern. She was manued by a crew that concern. She was manned by a crew picked up in New York.

wagon front, his foot catching in a guard rail. Daugling head downward, under the horses feet, he was kicked and dragged over the rough road by the wild steeds for everal miles until, weak from exhaustion, the borses drew up opposite the hotel. The body was crushed out of all sem-blance to human shape, and was simply a quivering mass of flesh.

"That's what matrimony generally is,"
replied the magistrate, and the clerks laughed heartily, as they always do when the magistrate cracks a joke.
When the bride and bridegroom appeared in the courtroom, Magistrate Olmstead, the clerks, and the court attendants were impressed with the beauty and grace of the pressed with the feating and grace of the woman and the aristocratic bearing of the man. Magistrate Olmstead bowed as he was introduced by Policeman Griffin, and invited the couple to enter his private office. After the man had told his name and that of his companion, he said:

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Foster held a brilliant reception last night at which over 290 guests representing the official, social, and diplomatic life of the Capital were present to meet the recently-appointed lexican Ambassador and Senora Azpiroz Vessel in Port With a Hole in and their eldest daughter, Senora De Perez Rivera. Mrs. Foster, in a very elegant tollette of gray silk, embroidered in silver, received her guests in the drawing-room, which, like the music-room and parlors, was dec-orated with Easter lifies and palms. As-sisting her were Senora Godoy, wife of the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy: Mrs. David J. Hill, Miss May Williams, and Miss Amy Fitts. Senora Aventor and her Miss Amy Fitts. Senora Azpiroz and her daughter were both attired with quiet ele-gance in black. At 10 o'clock supper was served in the dining-room, which was florally beautiful with pink carnations and ll-luminated with pink shaded lights. Throughout the entire evening delightful selections were rendered from a musicselections were rendered from a music-box whose sweet melodies were not asser-tive enough to mar the pleasure of con-versation. Among the guests were Mrs. Hobert, the British Ambassador, Lady Pauncefote, and the Misses Pauncefote, the German and French Ambassadors, with the gentlemen of their official staff, the Russian Ambassador and Mile. Cassini, the Russian Ambassador and Mile.
